F3J AND F3RES SOARING

Photos are from F3J and were taken by Jenni Alderman.

Friday was the start of F3RES and the F3J competition. F3RES is a new addition this year. In this event, pilots have a 9-minute slot in which to achieve a 6-minute flight and a precision landing. Launch is achieved by a standardized bungee.

F3RES models are limited to a 2-meter wingspan and three-channel control (rudder, elevator, and spoiler). The construction of these models is predominantly wood, but carbon fiber is permitted for spars, booms, and leading edges.

Seven rounds were completed in the first day of F3RES. Currently leading is Michael McGowan (fourth), Tom Scully (third), Gregory McGill (second), and Larry Jolly (first).

The FAI world championship for F3J is currently underway, with Team USA competing in Romania. This meant a smaller group at the International Aeromodeling Center, with four teams making an appearance on Friday.

F3J is a thermal duration contest where teams are matrixed to fly against each other at the same time. These airplanes tend to be lighter and larger in order to maximize thermal ability and launch height.

Today, both of these events will wrap up, bringing a close to the 2018 RC Soaring Nats. 🛩️
